

THE POST.

MIDDLEBURG, AUGUST 25, 1873

A Horrible Story.

Another instance of the diabolical ferocity which characterizes the predatory bands of Spanish robbers infesting certain sections of the "ever faithful isle" is related by the Hanava journals of the 27th ult. Sometime during last May a party of five robbers appeared at a Cuban plantation, possessed themselves of several good horses, taking also various articles of clothing belonging to an American engineer on the plantation, and then disappeared. The engineer who was absent at the time of the theft was committed, on his return, to the severe threats against the perpetrators of the robbery. The bandits on learning of this threat reappeared a few days later, took the engineer by surprise, tied him hand and foot, and then proceeded to lash him with whips and things till the man had fainted three times from the loss of blood and pain. They then tied him upon a chair before his dwelling, and two of the number walked into the house and violated his wife. The engineer after this inhuman event, became almost a maniac, his only thoughts by day and night being those of revenge.

Recently learning that these two friends were stopping at a neighboring plantation without advising anybody of his attentions, he traced himself and had the good fortune to find both of them lying on the floor in an insensible condition. He secured the wretches by tying their limbs with strong cords, and with the help of some negroes, conveyed them to his own house, ordered files to be lit, and then threw both of the bandits into a large boiler filled with water which soon began to boil. Their attempts to throw themselves out of the kettles, and their demands for water and cries for pity were heartrending, but their executioner took a fiendish delight in throwing in occasionally a little cold water, which, however, in a moment began to boil again. At the end of twenty minutes both his victims had ceased to exist. The engineer swears not to rest until he has caught and punished the other three a similar way.

Secrets of Masonry.

Old Zach Wheeler was quite a character in his time, being a clever, easy going, confident man, who managed to let everybody cheat him out of his inherited estate. Just as his last farm was about to slip out of his hands, he succeeded in raising the money to lift the mortgage. Aaron Remer, a prominent Mason, accompanied him to town. As they were riding along on horseback, Zach says to Aaron, in a confiding tone, "Now, Aaron, we are here alone, and I want you to tell me the secrets of Masonry." "I can't, Zach, they would kill me." "Why, they won't know, they'll never find it out." "Yes, they will; you'll speak of it." "No, I swear I won't." "Well, if you'll ride close along side of me, and put your hand on my thigh, and take the oath I'll admit to you, I'll tell you the secrets of Masonry." Zach was not slow to comply; and a most powerful "iron-clad oath" was administered and taken. "Now for the secrets," exclaimed the impatient and unsuspecting victim. "Well," said Aaron, with mock solemnity and secrecy, "in the first place, we Masons combine together to cheat everybody as much as we can. This is the first grand secret." "The second is like unto it. When we can't find anybody else to cheat we cheat each other, but as little as we can." "Well," exclaimed Zach, with evident surprise, "I swear I'll join. I wish I had done it twenty years ago! I might have been a rich man now." From the Columbus Sun.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption. Probably never before in the whole history of medicine has any syphilis been so widely and so deeply upon the confidence of mankind, as this excellent remedy for pulmonary complaints. Through a long series of years, and among most of the races of men it has risen higher and higher in its estimation, as it has become better known. Its uniform character and power to cure the various affections of the lungs and throat, have made it known as a reliable protector against them. While adapted to milder forms of disease and to young children, it is at the same time the most effectual remedy that can be given for incipient consumption, and the dangerous affections of the throat and lungs. As a provision against sudden attacks of Croup, it should be kept on hand in every family, and indeed as all are sometimes subject to colds and coughs, all should be provided with this antidote for them. Although settled Consumption is thought incurable, still great numbers of cases where the disease seemed settled, have been completely cured, and the patient restored to sound health by the Cherry Pectoral. So complete is its mastery over the disorders of the Lungs and Throat, that the most obstinate of them yield to it. When nothing else could reach them, under the Cherry Pectoral they subside and disappear. Singers and Public Speakers find great protection from it. Asthma is always relieved and often wholly cured by it. Bronchitis is generally cured by taking the Cherry Pectoral in small and frequent doses. So generally are its virtues known that we need not publish the certificates of them here, or do more than assure the public that its qualities are fully maintained.
